An Edmonton woman is fighting for her life after a suspected gas line explosion Wednesday afternoon caused an explosion-like incident in a northwest Edmonton home. RCMP said about 5:50 p.m. there was an explosion and then a large fire at the home on the 4500 block of 49th Avenue. Several people were injured, including one woman who suffered a traumatic brain injury, police said. She remains in hospital in critical condition. "A few of the residents were awake in the house and heard the explosion," RCMP Cpl. Michael Stromberg said. "The victims were awake and did flee the residence." Stromberg said one of the occupants told RCMP that she saw a man run out of the home. Police searched the area, but didn't find a suspect. "We are not aware of any suspects at this time," he said. Neighbours said they heard the blast and were concerned because it came from the northwest, near the neighbourhood pool and yards. RCMP evacuate the home. (Supplied by Rene Vidal) One neighbour said he saw RCMP trying to gain access to the home. "They were just knocking on doors and asking if anyone was home," he said. "At the time I thought it was just a police vehicle on the street because the police car did not have the lights on." Firefighters and paramedics were called to the scene at 49th Avenue and 101 Avenue. At about 9:20 p.m. police announced there was a third explosion in the same house. "For reasons that we are not clear on, the third blast took place shortly after the second blast, which is not typical," Stromberg said. The home has been

Technical Field This invention relates to a method of treating a composition of matter consisting of a metalloloid semiconductor and a metalloloid donor containing a rare earth element or an alkali metal such as sodium and a molybdenum compound. The invention further relates to a process for the manufacture of a semiconductor device. 2. Background Art Compounds consisting of metalloloid and donor semiconductors are in practical use today as an important functional material for electronic devices. These compounds are particularly useful as semiconductor materials capable of forming p-type and n-type semiconductors. A number of reports have been made on the properties of oxides of the Group IV elements, such as silicon and germanium, as semiconductor materials, but such oxides are not of practical utility because they have a high dielectric constant and lack electronic neutrality. Recently, the synthesis of metalloloid oxides that are stable in air, for example, compounds of silicon and germanium with a metal oxide and a metalloloid oxide, is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,533,873. There are,

What's New In Brick Pix?

Do you feel like a child again? Do you enjoy drawing but hate dealing with the task of selecting colors? Do you love the feeling of throwing colors on the canvas, with no need to edit what you draw? If you answered yes to the first three questions, you're going to love Brick Pix. Brick Pix is a creative and fun way to show your inner artistic skills by using only 1x1 toy-brick-themed squares. You can draw and adapt any idea to the brick-themed or the 8-bit-like art. Get straight to drawing You can go ahead and begin drawing right from the start, as the program will open the drawing canvas window directly. The user interface provided by Brick Pix is a bit lackluster in terms of features, but those available are easy to access, and the menus work smoothly. In the upper right corner, you will find a colored circle, and if you click it, a window will pop out. There, you can choose the colors you will be painting brick-shaped models on your canvas with. There are lots of premade colors you can pick from, but there's no need to worry, as you can also create your custom color, through either RGB or HSV codes. It works the same for the background, the only difference being that you need to access the color changer from the menu settings icon in the upper left corner. There, you will find more than the background color change option, as you will also be able to save and create a new picture or share it with your friends. Some more features could be added I do think an Undo feature should be available, especially since there's a big chance for you to often mess up your drawing, and is a bit cumbersome to color the background again unless you remember the values you set initially. Another feature that could be of use is the option to change the brush size, so that you can draw bigger squares when needed and fill bigger spaces with ease, instead of just one at a time. An engaging application that you can enjoy with friends Brick Pix is a fun-to-use application, especially for kids who are bursting with creativity, but can also be used by people who love squared themed and 8-bit art.
