As the 99th descendant of the Elden family, you are to fight against the dark lord which has taken over the Land Between, and change your fate as a Lord of the Land Between. The world of "Land Between", a land where the Elden family ruled and lost their grandeur, lies in a precarious state. The dark power is growing stronger day by day, and the prophesied Elden Ring, which was created by the Elden family to protect the world from the dark lord, is gone. What's more, the land of the Elden family has fallen into ruin, and the people have begun to turn away from their forefathers in the face of hardship and war. At this time, two princes in the Elden family, Kintaro and Alexander, appear in the abandoned lands between. Kintaro, who is the golden prince, and Alexander, who is a silver prince, each bear the power of magic that turns the fate of the world. The Elden Ring, which is sealed with the power of the Kintaro's and Alexander's individual powers, is the one that can serve as a mediator and purifier of the Land Between. It is said that whoever carries this ring will bring about the restoration of the Elden family and will be able to bring glory and light to all people.

However, it is also said that the Elden Ring will be covered by darkness if this person is born as a dark princess, or becomes a black dragon. In this time of need, the fate of the Elden family and the world is in the hands of Kintaro and Alexander, and it is time to be reborn as the Elden Ring into the hands of its new owners. ■ New Game Features

Warware - Wingmere (PS3, XBOX360, PC) Review by PC GamesN

"One need not be a scholar to know at which time the war of Caesar in Gaul was won. At which time Hern and his followers fell. Or, the truth that Caesar was stabbed to death by his friend, Brutus. But if you would understand clearly the meaning of the most famous words of the world's one and only ruler, Julius Caesar, then you should read Julius Caesar by William Shakespeare. Who else but Shakespeare could have written such magnificent speeches in such lively and dramatic way? Do not lie to yourself, even if you are a scholar, if you do not like reading, then first learn how to read, but if you want to read at all, then open yourself to Shakespeare! His works are known and taken seriously to this day."

HINT: While reading this, listen to the "Helican Warspeech" from Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar

Q: Trouble with linefeed - Spyder If you open a file using linefeed, or more specifically, using the inbuilt interpreter in Spyder 2.2, when you try and read it, it returns as an empty list. i.e. [[]] Can someone explain to me why this might happen, and if there's any way to get around it. I'm not too familiar with file handling but that's where this is happening.

A: From the Docs for Spyder list - A Sequence with a finite length. The first and last elements will be used and the other elements will be cleared. I suspect that what you are trying to do, is to read the file and find a linefeed, once in Spyder you will need to open the file for read only file = open('filename.txt','r')

Whenever I put on my favorite, Miss Go's pastels or start cleaning out my closet, I'm drawn to my T. J. Maxx bag. However, after multiple all-out, haphazardly searching trips, I've realized that my bag isn't very exciting, so I've decided to do something a little more fun: a story based on my bag! Carrie has had her T. J. Maxx bag for years and holds no animosity towards the bag. She loves it because it is functional, spacious and available at any time of day. She likes to use the small size for grocery shopping, school and some trips to the park and use the large size for when she's heading into work. On most days of the week, this is her regular routine: -Out with friends on the weekend -Work -Park -School -Home However, sometimes this routine changes for Carrie and one day, she's feeling extra charitable. When she woke up that morning, she wasn't feeling so charitable and was craving coffee. That day, when she got the bag out of the closet, a cup of coffee fell out! She thought that was pretty strange, so she ran to the kitchen to grab some of her favorite, single origin coffee beans. After a moment, Carrie noticed a piece of paper tucked into the corner of the bag. In curiosity, she pulled it out. After reading the short note, she was a little confused because she hadn't done anything to deserve such generosity. Once she made the coffee and finished brewing it, she ran to the kitchen sink to wash her mug and the crumpled piece of paper fell out. Inside the paper was a note from that morning. It read, "I know you don't believe in Christmas, but there is no
