Engine slabs removed by accident.--- abstract: 'We explore the use of convolutional neural networks (CNNs) in the context of semi-supervised learning of behavioral data. In particular, we focus on using CNNs to regress from imaging data to continuous-valued actions such as center of mass in a head-restrained arena, or center of pressure in an upright stance. We first examine the performance of our task-specific CNNs when trained with a relatively small dataset. The trained CNNs are then used to learn from a larger dataset that was collected with a different camera in a different setup. We observe that the learned action-specific CNNs are able to generalize across setups, and make accurate predictions even when the training data is collected with a different camera. We also find that unlabeled data collected in the same setup as the labeled data leads to almost perfect calibration of predictions to actual values. Our results show that CNNs are a strong candidate for semi-supervised learning in the context of continuous behavioral data.' author: - 'Nicu AI

"All that is solid melts into air" (Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, 'The Communist Manifesto', 1848). 1 March 2011 My first print book, Thinking Resistance is now available for sale in print, electronic, and paperback formats via my website www.marxistmusings.com. All profits will go to the Maoist-oriented publication "Truth and Justice" to support current news and research against capitalist dictatorship in Pakistan and elsewhere. I have been honored by the offer of an interview with the journal "Radical Philosophy and Psychology". The journal's editorial board is composed of academics, activists, and philosophers who seek to develop or integrate radical critiques into current discussions of psychology and culture. They have published an interview of my work with Shahid Hassan. The interview, available in PDF format, may be read here. Comment: "The film has an interesting title, something to do with how ads and state censorship tells us what we should think." (SPW) "The film is a marvellous example of a witty and light hearted collaboration that brings together many different strands of the human condition, including all the irrationality that infests our little lives. It is a delightful work that cannot possibly be improved on in its treatment of the ethics and sociology of advertising. The film is a good example of the power of music and fine performance to provide a rich and moving expression of life itself." (FL) "As a critique of advertising and the difficulty of change in a political context, this film is often eloquent and funny." (DR) "Melancholy and melancholy history is difficult to watch. That Kevin Smith is able to make it bearable to an extent is an achievement in and of itself. He succeeds in a number of ways but is best known for making fun of fat people, in the process letting us see that this is just the tip of the iceberg of human suffering." (EMT) "All The Stars" is an adaptation of the 2001 operetta "Alban's Last Song", which is an opera by the composer Alban Gerhardt. The operetta was written in 1920 and set in pre-World War I Europe, dealing with the themes of the impending political upheaval, and was especially popular in Germany
