For an in-depth review of Photoshop's powerful options, check out the CS6 Master Class by my friend William K. Banfield (a.k.a. the Photoshop Guy), or the in-depth Photoshop CS6 Online Training from Lynda.com. Getting Up and Running with Photoshop If you're new to Photoshop, start with the basics and just play around with your basic editing tools: The commands that you may recognize from other programs such as CorelDRAW and Word are available in Photoshop. Understanding the tools If you want to edit an image in Photoshop, you have the following basic tools: Select: A basic selection tool that can select items by any color, including black and white. You can select an area and its contents with the rectangle-shaped tool. You can also use the Lasso tool to select an area of an image by clicking and dragging it across the screen. The Lasso tool automatically recognizes any color and highlights it in a selected area. Move: A basic tool for moving objects around. You can drag objects around the screen in a selected area or create a selection from a freehand stroke along an edge of an image. You can also reposition objects by using the move tool and then deleting the original object in the process. Transform: A basic tool for moving, rotating, and scaling objects. You use this tool to move, rotate, or scale a selected object. You can also distort an object using the straighten tool by dragging the control bar that appears over the image to straighten crooked items. A scale tool lets you zoom in on an image or move it to any size by using the 100 percent scale at the bottom of the tool. You can also change a selected area or bit of an image's color using the hue/saturation tool. The eyedropper tool allows you to select colors in an image to allow you to easily apply them to other parts of an image, change existing colors, or even use them in other images. Eraser: A basic tool for erasing objects or selecting areas. You can use this tool as a substitute for the Select tool or the Magic Wand tool to select areas of an image. You can also use the tool to select objects or an entire image or region. Paint: A basic tool for painting items on an image, using any of the tools that are available. You can select a brush preset or choose any of the brushes in the brush library that

From the news, it is difficult to know who is the real fighter in the red corner: Raymond Kobie, who claims he was beaten by a former boxing champ, or the undefeated middleweight champion of the world, Saul Alvarez. He has vacated his belt, and has a bad reputation, but he seems to be the one who has put his fist in his mouth, and not a little inside. It is not without reason that he announces: "I am the toughest fighter in the world". His first fight was without a doubt the most anticipated in his career, as he traveled from the state of Ecuador to the ring of Mexico, defending his title on three different occasions. In the first, the elder boy, Marco Antonio Rubio, 24 years old, wanted to show off his speed and skill, and surprise his opponent, the unorthodox Kobie. Kobie was also the youngest opponent that had ever stood against Alvarez, and the most unknown by his opponent. Even with a month of preparation, Rubio was able to land some good blows, which Kobie's trainer did not know what to do with. There were some good blows, especially to the body, and although Kobie suffered a serious cut on the brow in the third round, he was able to keep going. He passed by rounds seven and eight, and even though he was hurt, he managed to land a punch in the 11th, but had to retire due to the injury. The rematch, however, was a perfect show of the superiority of the Mexican. He beat Kobie with a unanimous decision, and in the process won his belt back. So what's with that ugly face? The last fight, his first as middleweight, was a triumph for his chin. The current champion, Saul Alvarez, a true boxer of the Mexican school, created a lot of excitement in his early days, showing various tricks and flashy moves that made him a star at a very young age. But Saul is now 30, and has been in many, many wars. The distance is changing, he lacks speed and is much slower. Kobie was just young and naïve, and although he tries very hard not to give in to his opponent, he was unable to do it. Kobie's face has been his worst enemy. Just two fights ago, he suffered a broken nose during the third round of his fight with Rubio, and after that, he broke his cheekbone and jaw. "This injury was not intentional", said someone

Q: Hard audio card - does it even exist? I am interested in getting an audio card that will be used for mixing but has room for at least 4 channels, preferably more. It is up to the user to use the audio mixer, so it can be anything like a soundboard with a mixer and recorders attached (which seems to be what most of the time) or at least the ability to select which channel to record and which one to mix. The cheapest card I have come across is the Acesso (article) which costs around $290 and only has 2 channels, but it is possible that something much better exists. A: What you're looking for is called a "non-audio" card, or a soundcard. The Sondigo VX24, for example, costs about a grand, and has 4 analog channels, 2 digital channels, and it is capable of 8-channel mixing. For your purposes, not stereo, but mix and record. Rammstein's live show was mostly built on the screaming fans' "rhythmic energy" that have really captivated the entire world. In an interview, Rammstein band members commented that fans scream a lot during their live show, but they have never experienced such a racket before. Asked what they felt when fans scream, keyboard player Christoph Schneider said: "It's so hard to describe. (It's) a lot of energy that is focused, that completely took over the whole hall and the whole stage. It's just incredible. "I think that the audience as a whole is really happy about it, because it is a sign that you are alive and that people care about you". Udo adds: "It is really astonishing what they can do. It is huge. You go on stage and then you just die. You can't really think about anything." Frontman Richard Kruspe feels that "all this energy is radiating from the audience, and I don't know how to explain that. "I just get the feeling that they are alive. That they love and they want to be here. That's what makes it so special and amazing." The band wants to thank the very people that have worked so hard to get them to the top
