avk : i have an older xp box that i use on occasion for transfers to my macbook pro. i'm not so sure i'd be able to install the drivers, but i'm thinking i can try. i have an old 4 gb usb thumb drive that i can use to transfer them over and then get them to my macbook. you have any suggestions on how to use the mac to move the videos off of the mac mini and then over to my macbook? the mini is a very neat little machine and has plenty of room for video editing, but i'd rather not use it as a backup if i can help it. avk : i'm not so sure i'd be able to install the drivers, but i'm thinking i can try. i have an old 4 gb usb thumb drive that i can use to transfer them over and then get them to my macbook. you have any suggestions on how to use the mac to move the videos off of the mac mini and then over to my macbook? the mini is a very neat little machine and has plenty of room for video editing, but i'd rather not use it as a backup if i can help it. avk : i'm not so sure i'd be able to install the drivers, but i'm thinking i can try. i have an old 4 gb usb thumb drive that i can use to transfer them over and then get them to my macbook. you have any suggestions on how to use the mac to move the videos off of the mac mini and then over to my macbook? the mini is a very neat little machine and has plenty of room for video editing, but i'd rather not use it as a backup if i can help it. avk : you mention that you have a new pc with w10. did you keep your older computer which presumably worked well with firewire if you did, it would then seem possible to transfer the minidvs to the old computer and then transfer the files to your new computer via an ext hd or whatever else works.

Driver Minidv Md80

If you found that the manufacturer website only offers you a driver for Windows XP, you can search the Intel website for a driver for your operating system. If there isn't one there, you can look for support under the forums. Note: If your PC runs Windows Vista or Windows 8, you won't need to do this. Once your camcorder is connected, you will need to verify that the proper driver has been selected by Windows 7. Windows 7 comes with two i.LINK/IEEE 1394 drivers; a new one and a legacy one. For video capture, you will need to use the legacy driver. Simply follow these step-by-step instructions to make sure the right one is installed.
